Paper Title:

Comprehensively Summarizing What Distracts Students from Online Learning.

Paper Link:

https://www.hindawi.com/journals/hbet/2022/1483531/

1.Summary:

This paper aims to define distraction in online learning, outlining known types and introducing new categories, driven by the urgent need to address distractions' negative impact on students' focus and learning performance in the digital education landscape. However, this research creates a boost of new educational system as well as the set-backs of recent educational system. The paper is mainly build by knowing about different online learning system and also education system of different countries. The author mainly focuses of a topic that can be part of a great civilization also backbone of the whole world. There are some things that can be also come to light which the author encourage other researchers to do so.

2.Limitations:

The prime limitation of this research paper is there is no set of database where the author analyze it and prove that students don't want to learn online. There is also a limitation that some of the countries don't have enough materials to support online learning or we can say virtual learning. We can say that almost every research has some of the critics and limitation, so keeping aside the limitations the paper is overall a perfect one.